

The fabulous Parker boys and their mother, above: Alan, Jill, Oliver and Nathaniel Parker

Left: Rebecca Hall at the Electric Cinema. Right: the adventures of Mr Stephen Fry

The von Bulows: Claus and his daughter Cosima

NOISY PARKERS

A PREMIERE, A PLAY & PORTRAITS OF LADIES

It may have been a school night but no way were party-tarts Tamsin Egerton and Talulah Riley going to miss free champagne and fish 'n' chips at the Fade To Black premiere, the latest offering from St Trinian's director Oliver Parker, at the Electric. Meanwhile, a chorus of thespes including Imelda Staunton and Penelope Wilton took their £275 seats at the Almeida for the annual Chain Play, a collaboration by writers including Neil LaBute, to raise funds for the Islington theatre. And over at the Mall Galleries, 50 women, including former MI5 chief Dame Stella Rimington and author Jacqueline Wilson, sized up their new portraits by Tess Barnes at the 50 Women of Substance exhibition in aid of Breast Cancer Haven.

At Random, left: Gail Rebeck. Live and Lette live, below: Kathy Lette at the Women of Substance fundraiser

Sophie Okonedo at the Almeida

The St Trinian's tarts weren't going to miss out on free champagne